Mr. Gladstone, however, assured him that he had not, up to that date, formed any definite plan, but that he had only committed himself to examination and inquiry, and on that assurance Mr. Chamberlain consented to join the Ministry. It is difficult to understand how such an assurance could have been given. Parliament met on February 18th, with Mr. Gladstone as Prime Minister; on March 26th Mr. Chamberlain and others left the Government; and on April 8th a complete Home Rule Bill for Ireland was placed before the House of Commons. Eight days later a Land Bill for Ireland was also introduced. It is hard to believe that in such short intervals any effective examination and inquiry could have taken place, or that there was time to decide on the provisions of, and to draft, such large, complicated and far-reaching measures as these two Bills proved to be.
