Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Division of Engineering: Of the National Research Council in Cooperation With Engineering Foundations The National Research Council is a cooperative organization of American societies and scientific men concerned with the physical, mathematical, and biological sciences, and their applications to human welfare through the agricultural, engineering and medical arts. Approximately eighty societies are included. Among the Councils members are also business men interested in the industries. The Council was organized in 1916 under the charter of the National Academy of Sciences to coordinate the research facilities of the country for work on war problems. In 1918, by executive order of the President of the United States, It was reorganized as a permanent body for the promotion of research in the natural sciences and of the application and dissemination of scientific knowledge for the national well-being. Departments of the Government are directed to cooperate with the Council; but although closely and cordially related to the Government, the Council is not a governmental bureau. Organization The Research Council has seven divisions of science and technology, dealing with 1, physics, mathematics and astronomy; 2, engineering; 3, chemistry and chemical technology; 4, geology and geography; 5, medical sciences; 6, biology and agriculture; 7, psychology and anthropology; and six divisions of general relations, namely, 1. Federal relations; 2, foreign relations; 3, States relations; 4, educational relations; 5, research extension, and 6, research information. The work of the National Research Council is performed by an Executive Board of approximately forty members, having the customary officers, by numerous standing and special committees, a small office staff, and the organizations of the Divisions. Between the bimonthly meetings of the Executive Board, an Interim...
