Excerpt: .the many alterations in the dramatic fashions of which it was the stage. then newly erected, and in 1737 the theatre in Portugalstreet ceased to be a temple of the drama. It was afterwards converted into a Staffordshire pottery warehouse, and was only pulled down about two years back. On the same side of the way, a few yards higher up, is the Insolvent Debtors Court, built in 1824, after the designs of Sir John Soane. Returning to the eastern side of Drury-lane, and passing some obscure courts, we arrive at Duke-street, a memento of the Duke of York, afterwards James II., opposite Little Russell-street, and the other extremity of which terminates in Lincoln s Inn-fields. In this street is a Roman Catholic chapel, once belonging to the Sardinian embassy, which narrowly escaped destruction during the NoPopery riots of 1780; opposite to this chapel lodged Benjamin...
